The first successful design for a semi-automatic rifle is attributed to Austria-born gunsmith Ferdinand Ritter von Mannlicher, who unveiled the design in 1885. The Model 85 was followed by the equally innovative Mannlicher Models 91, 93 and 95 semi-automatic rifles. Although Mannlicher earned his reputation with his bolt-action rifle designs, he also produced a few semi-automatic pistols ...

The M1A tactical rifle maintains the accuracy that was necessary during wartime, but applies it to more civilian settings today. With such shooting precision, many gun owners regard the M1A as the best semi-automatic tactical rifle available on the market. The Standard Series is a faithful semi-auto only recreation of the original M14.
