As an administrator, you can use domain-wide delegation of authority to grant third-party and internal applications access to your users' data.. App developers and administrators can create service accounts with OAuth 2.0. Then, you authorize the service accounts to access your users' data without requiring each user to give consent.

Note: When passing scopes at the Account initialization or on the account.authenticate method, the scope helpers are automatically converted to the protocol flavor. Those are the only places where you can use scope helpers. Any other object using scopes (such as the Connection object) expects scopes that are already set for the protocol. Token ...

Note how the local assignment (which is default) didn't change `scope_test`'s binding of `spam`. The nonlocal assignment changed `scope_test`'s binding of `spam`, and the global assignment changed the module-level binding.. You can also see that there was no previous binding for `spam` before the global assignment.. 9.3. A First Look at Classes¶. Classes introduce a little bit of new syntax, three new ...

Session Secret Security. To improve security, the session data in the cookie is signed with a session secret using HMAC-SHA1. This session secret should optimally be a cryptographically secure random value of an appropriate length which for HMAC-SHA1 is greater than or equal to 64 bytes (512 bits, 128 hex characters). You would be advised not to use a secret that is less than 32 bytes of ...

secretOrKey: we are using the expedient option of supplying a symmetric secret for signing the token. Other options, such as a PEM-encoded public key, may be more appropriate for production apps (see here for more information). In any case, as cautioned earlier, do not expose this secret publicly. The validate() method deserves some discussion ...

Specific enough that you will know when you have found an answer. Practical in that you could reasonably find answers to it in the scope of a research project (that scope could be large or small depending on your question). Actionable, in that, if you answer the question, your team will be able to make changes based on what you learn.

Jewell Trigger. The Jewell trigger was considered the “gold standard” for decades. The patent for the trigger design dates back to 1985, and it was the go-to trigger for most high-end precision rifles since that time. In 2015, I surveyed the top 100 PRS shooters and 40% of them were using a Jewell trigger, which was not just the most popular, it was more than double any other brand!
