

Morning washing is followed by the recitation of the same blessing said after washing hands before bread. After a Meal. In some Hasidic and other communities, it is customary to wash the hands after a meal, a practice known as mayim acharonim, or “afterwards water.”

Ritual Hand Washing Before Meals | My Jewish Learning

Baptism is a Greek translation of the Hebrew word Tevila, meaning Immersion. Hebrew immersion is usually done in a Mikveh, which means a pool where water has gathered. The Torah does not say much about immersion and the mikveh, but it appears to have become an essential part of Hebrew religious life by Temple times.

IMMERSION (BAPTISM)

wash in Hebrew - Translation of wash to Hebrew from Morfix dictionary, the leading online English Hebrew translation site, with audio pronunciation, inflections, synonyms, example sentences, Hebrew Nikud (punctuation), encyclopedia and more Copyright code: d41d8cd98f00b204e9800998ecf8427e.